Three Types of People

1. TECHNOLOGY
2. DEMOCRACY
3. NEITHER
The New York Times

The Two Codes Your Kids Need to Know

The College Board came up with a surprising conclusion about keys to success for college and life.

By Thomas L. Friedman
Opinion Columnist
Our Goal:
Two million students earn college credit in AP Computer Science courses and AP U.S. Government and Politics by 2025.
TWO CODES

CONTENT
PROJECTS
INTERNSHIPS
PARTNERS
Building Two Codes

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Big Goal: Cumulative Credit</th>
<th>External Partnerships</th>
<th>Two Codes Policies</th>
<th>Equitable Gender Access</th>
<th>Underrepresented Student Credit</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Two million students earn credit in AP GoPo &amp; CSP combined by May 2025</td>
<td>Reimagine relationships with external partners to increase civics and computer science access and participation</td>
<td>Rethink internal and external policies that can stimulate growth of civics and computer science education</td>
<td>Reach 50:50 ratio of male:female participation in CSP</td>
<td>Increase number of traditionally underrepresented students earning credit in CSP and GoPo</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Two Codes in the World

Business Analysis

Algorithms were supposed to make Virginia judges fairer. What happened was far more complicated.

Apple’s Reach Reshapes Medical Research

The company’s tools enable researchers to track huge numbers of people. But doctors do not yet know if it will provide the desired benefits. It is still an open question.

TikTok, Under Scrutiny, Distances Itself From China

Three senators have called for an investigation into the social media app, which is owned by the Chinese tech giant ByteDance.

Politics

U.S. Struggles to Stem Chinese Efforts to Recruit Scientists

Officials see indictment against University of Kansas professor, who says he is falsely accused, as a possible prosecution blueprint.